St. George's Diocese Welcomes Bishop Renouf

On Sunday morning at 10.30 the Bishop sang High Mass for the first time in his Cathedral. Precisely at the hour the Procession arrived at the main door of the Cathedral and the Bishop was received by the Diocesan Administrator, Monsignor Sears, and the attending Clergy. The presentation of the Papal Bulls here took place and the Bishop entered the Cathedral while the organ pealed forth the welcoming strains of "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus." He was led to the Throne where, after the prayers at the Faldstool, he vested for Mass, just about to begin. The Deacon of the Mass was Monsignor Sears, the Sub-deacon, Father O'Reilly, the deacons at the Throne were Fathers Adams and Brennan, Dean O'Rourke acted as Archpriest. Father Joy was Master of Ceremonies, Father Ker- van conducted the Choir.

After the Gospel had been chanted Father Brennan ascended the Pulpit and read the Papal Bull addressed to the Clergy and people of St. George's Diocese. The translation of the Bull is as follows:

"BENEDICT, Bishop, Servant of the Servants of God, to his beloved children the Clergy and People of the Town and Diocese of St. George's, Vind. health and Apostolic Benediction.—To-day, we, by our Apostolic Authority and acting on the advice of the Cardinals of the Sacred Congregation of Rites, appoint Henry Thomas Renouf, formerly Parish Priest of St. Patrick's, in the City of St. John's, to be Bishop of St. George's, lately deprived of its Chief Pastor.

"Wherefore we exhort all of you of society from the existence of such and strictly oblige you to pay dutiful attention to the Episcopacy of respect to Henry Thomas Renouf, the Catholic Church. A look even of elected Bishop. We strictly oblige the most cursory kind, provided only you to give ear to his paternal exhortations and to conduct yourselves towards him as dutiful children.

"We command that this letter be read on the first Feast of Obligation from the Pulpit in the Cathedral Church."

Given at Rome, at St. Peter's, Sept. 27th, 1920, in the seventh year of our Pontificate.

Then Fr. Brennan delivered a lucid and logical discourse on the Dignity and Office of the Episcopacy which in part follows:

My Lord, Rev. Fathers, and Dearly Beloved Brethren,—

"The whole-hearted welcome which was extended to our Bishop to-day must have delighted his heart and given him great courage. It shows him by your sincere and unmistakable gratification at his arrival in our midst as chief pastor that he finds himself among a people who are truly Catholic and devoted. The courteous manner in which you expressed this welcome gives proof if any were needed of your deep-seated loyalty to our Holy Church, and shows at the same time a deep appreciation on your part of the dignity which attaches to the Episcopal office.

And perhaps, my dear Brethren, assembled as we are in the Mother Church of this Diocese wherein is the Bishop's Throne and from which he exercises his spiritual jurisdiction, it would be useful and instructive to consider for a while on an occasion of this kind, the dignity and powers of the Episcopal Office and the wonderful benefits which accrue to the world at large and to each individual that it be unprejudiced. Into any chapter of the history of Christendom brings before us in every age this body. A study of the growth of Christianity shows us that this office goes back through the centuries, and we finally discover that it originated by the Galilean sea when Jesus Christ gathered round Him the chosen twelve appointed them to rule the Church for Him and by His authority. Yes—so does history give its verdict. As we go back link by link in that unbroken chain, (always easy to find even in the most turbulent seas of trouble through which it has passed) we are forced to admit the Divine Institution of the Episcopacy. It takes its name from no wandering monk nor owes its origin to no haughty prince. Its origin and its prerogatives are from above. Its charter was not given by a man, not by a group of men, not even by a national assembly but by One greater than any of them.

—It was given by God. And if there were no other proofs at hand the countless struggle and its final success over fearful odds shows that this organization differs in some way from the proud dynasties which it saw born and saw die. What dynasty to-day can compare with it in age and good service? Beside it the most ancient of them all is as of yesterday and the greatest of them is but mean. The councils of these men beginning with that at Jerusalem presided over by St. Peter to the latest presided over by Pius IX are landmarks in history, and have had no small influence in directing its course; for history gives more than one instance where the timely warnings of these Councils have saved society from entering upon courses which would have led to its ruin ultimately. In short its powers of endurance and its wisdom cannot be accounted for in human terms.

Bishops are for us a link with Jesus Christ, speaking to us His saving words, ruling us for Him, guarding jealously the sacred deposit entrusted to their care, living witnesses of truth. Though Bishops die as they needs must the Episcopacy lives on fulfilling in each generation the Divine work for which it was instituted and conferring on each successive link in the chain the duties and the character of the first Bishops—the Apostles. To these first Bishops was given the onerous honour of establishing, and with the promised aid of God, continuing, the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church throughout the world, of laying before all creatures the truths which He had made known to them during their time of close friendship with Him, and a right to demand a hearing for those doctrines. The what a wonderful title, then and compelling one, do not Bishops appeal when, as accredited ambassadors of Christ, they make known His Law. To them just as to the Apostles has been said, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you."

True to their commission, these men have preserved through all the ages the truth. They have watched over it and successfully, and at no small sacrifice resisted those who in pride and blindness would stand up self-constituted revisers of the doctrine of Christ. No other body of men could rival that of those men in their vigilance against heresy and their dignified assurance in making known the Truth. Many have attempted to make bold innovations and their erroneous doctrines have seemed certain of triumph, but posterity has been forced to acknowledge that these men have strayed into courses invariably tending to the destruction of the spirit and truth of the Gospel. Nothing else could have resulted when men abandoning the divinely appointed teachers sought in a book for the entire Message of Christ, each one taking on himself the prerogatives given to a few. Over against this the extraordinary organization of the Catholic Church has struck even men who were unwilling to admit its Divine origin. And not alone its organization but its consistent advocacy of unchanging Truth in the face of a fickle, selfish, stiff-necked world. Herein lies the great benefit enjoyed by us to-day from the existence of the Episcopate.

They are, as I have already pointed out, successors of the Apostles in office and the succession has never been interrupted. They consequently are a link with our Divine Master and preserve for us to-day intact the message which He delivered nearly two thousand years ago. He well knew the uselessness of committing this important and far-reaching Gospel to a mere book. He knew that

THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE

CHAPTER IX.

A Mysterious Telegram.

He thought of the handsome stripling who used to wander about the grounds at Cawdor, trying to conceal from my lady the fact that he smoked cigars. He did not fear his father and smoked boldly before him, but at the first sound of my lady's rustling silk he flew rather than ran. Lord Lanswell laughed aloud as he thought of it all.

"He is just as frightened at my lady now," he said to himself. "I cannot help feeling touched and flattered that he has sent for me in his trouble. I will help him and my lady shall never know."

His heart warmed to his son and he—no one knew how dearly he loved him, nor how completely his life was wrapped up in him. Then he heard a cab drive up to the door. Surely that must be Lance.

He listened in impatient suspense—he heard whispering in the outer hall, as though some consultation were being held.

"What in the world is the boy making a mystery over?" he asked himself.

Then he started from his chair in unutterable amazement.

Before him stood Lance, Lord Chandos, holding the hands of the most beautiful girl he had ever seen in his life.

CHAPTER X.

A Shocked Father.

"I am quite sure of one thing," Lord Chandos had said, as they drew near London, "and that is, Leone—if my father sees you before my mother has time to interfere, it will be all right. He can resist anything but a pretty face—that always conquers him."

"I wish," said Leone, with a sigh, "that I were less proud. Do you know, Lance, that I cannot endure to hear you speak as though I were to be received as a great favor. I wonder why I am so proud? I am a farmer's niece, and you are the son of a powerful earl, yet I—please do not be offended; I cannot help it—I feel quite as good as you."

He laughed aloud. There was nothing he enjoyed better than this proud frankness of hers, which would never yield to or worship rank or title.

"I am glad to hear it, Leone," he replied. "For my own part, I think you very much better than myself. I have no fear, if my father sees you first, and that is why I have telegraphed to him to meet us at Dunmore House."

"But," she insisted, "suppose that he does not like me—what shall we do then?"

"Why," he replied, "the right and proper thing for me to do then will be to try to love you, if possible, even better than I do now. Leone, the first thing we must do is to drive to one of the court milliners; no matter what follows, your dress must be attended to at once—first impressions are everything. You look royally beautiful in all that you wear, but I would much that my father saw you in a proper costume. Suppose we drive to a milliner's first, and choose a handsome dress, and all things suitable, then we can go to the Queen's Hotel; the trunks can be sent after us. We can dine there; and when you are dressed, a la Lady Chandos, we will go to Dunmore House, and carry everything before us."

He did as he had said. They drove first to Madame Caroline's. Lord Chandos was accustomed to the princely style of doing things. He sent for madame, who looked up in wonder at his fair young face.

"This is my wife," he said, "Lady Chandos. We have been in the country and she wants everything new, in your best style."

It seemed to him hours had passed when madame reappeared. Certainly he hardly knew the superbly beautiful girl with her. Was it impossible that after all the poets had said about "beauty unadorned" that dress made such a difference. It had changed his beautiful Leone into a beautiful empress. Madame looked at him for approval.

"I hope your lordship is satisfied," she said; with the usual quickness of her nation, she had detected the fact that this had been a runaway marriage.

"I am more than satisfied," he replied.

Before him stood a tall, slender girl whose superb figure was seen to advantage in one of the world's most fashionable dresses—trailing silk and rich velvet, so skillfully that seemed to crown the rippling hair; pearl-gray gloves that might have grown on the white hands. Her dress was simply perfect; it was at once elegant and ladylike rich and costly.

"I shall not be afraid to face my father now," he said, "I have a talisman."

Yet this fair young face grew paler as they reached Dunmore House. It was a terrible risk, and he knew it—a terrible ordeal. He realized what he had done when the housekeeper told him the earl awaited him in the dining-room. A decided sanction of nervousness came over him, and he looked at the fresh, proud, glowing beauty of his young wife to reassure himself. She was perfect, he felt that, and he was satisfied.

"Give me your hand, Leone," he said, and the touch of that little hand gave him new courage.

He went in leading her, and the earl sprang from his seat in startling amazement. Lord Chandos went boldly up to him.

"Father," he said, "allow me to introduce to you my wife, Leone, Lady Chandos."

The earl gave a terrified glance at the beautiful southern face, but made no answer.

"I have to ask your forgiveness," continued the young lordling, "for having married without your consent; but I knew, under the circumstances, it was useless to ask it, so I married without."

Still the same terrified look and utter silence.

"Father," cried Lord Chandos, "why do you not welcome my young wife home?"

Then Lord Lanswell tried to smile—a dreadful, ghastly smile.

"My dear boy," he said, "you are jesting; I am quite sure you are jesting. It cannot be real; you would not be so cruel!"

"Father," repeated the young lord, in an imperative voice "will you bid my wife welcome home?"

"No," said the earl stoutly, "I will not. The young lady will excuse me if I decline to bid her welcome to a home that can never be hers."

"Father," cried the young man, reproachfully, "I did not expect this from you."

"I do not understand what else you could expect," cried the earl, angrily. "Do you mean to tell me that it is true that this person is your wife?"

"My dear and honored wife," replied the young man.

"Do you mean to tell me that you have actually married this lady, Lance—really married her?"

"I have, indeed, father, and it is about the best action of my life," said Lord Chandos.

"How do you intend to face my lady?" asked the earl, with the voice and manner of one who proposes a difficultly not to be solved.

"I thought you would help us, father; at least, speak to my wife."

The earl looked at the beautiful, distressed face.

"I am very sorry," he said, "sorry for you, Leone, and the lady, but I cannot receive her as your wife."

"She is my wife, whether you receive her or not," said Lord Chandos. "Leone, how can I apologize to you? I never expected that my father would receive you in this fashion. Father, look at her; think how young and how beautiful she is; you cannot be unkind to her."

"I have no wish to be unkind," said the earl, "but I cannot receive her as your wife."

Then, seeing the color fade from her face, he hastened to find her a chair, and poured out a glass of wine for her; he turned with a stern face to his son.

"What have you been doing?" he cried. "While your mother and I thought you were working hard to make up for lost time, what have you been doing?"

"I have been working very hard," he replied, "and my work will bring forth good fruit; but, father, I have found leisure for love as well."

"So it seems," said the earl, dryly: "perhaps you will tell me who this lady is, and why she comes home with you?"

"My wife; her name was Leone Noel; she is now Lady Chandos."

For the first time Leone spoke.

"I am a farmer's niece, my lord," she said, simply.

Her voice had a ring of music in it so sweet that it struck the earl with wonder.

"A farmer's niece," he replied "you will forgive me for saying that a farmer's niece can be no fitting wife for my son."

"I love him, my lord, very dearly, and I will try hard to be all that he can wish me to be."

"Bravely spoken; but it is quite in vain; my lady would never hear of such a thing—I dare not—I cannot sanction it, even by a word, my lady would never forgive me. Can you tell me when this rash action was accomplished?"

"This is our wedding day, father, and you receive us like this. How cruel and cold."

"Nay, I am neither," said the earl; "it is rather you, Lance, who do not seem to realize what you have done. You seem to think you belong to your self; you are mistaken; a man in your position belongs to this country, his race, to his family; that view of the question, probably, did not strike you."

SEALFISHERY.

The sealfishery of the past season was one of the smallest on record, and the ships prosecuting the fishery only brought in 33,985 seals of a net weight of 757½ tons. The price paid for the fat was $11.00, and of this sum the usual one-third part was paid to the crews and amounts to $53,316.The failure of the fishery was due to the inability of the steamers to reach the main body of seals. An attempt was made to send some of the steamers on a second trip, but this was prevented by the refusal of the crews to continue the voyage. It is reported that only eight steamers will fit out for the fishery this season.

HERRING.

The Herring Fishery the past year has given very poor returns to the packer and exporter.The Spring pack of split herring was comparatively small, and although fair prices were paid to the packers it did not leave any margin of profit on account of the high cost of salt, nets and barrels.The exporters who purchased the Spring pack of split herrings have found some difficulty in disposing of them. The American market is not consuming any quantity of split herrings and the West Indian markets are not active.

The Scotch cure herring put up the past Winter and Spring are not saleable. The new Scotch cure pack put up during the last three months of the year are bringing good prices for the large and medium full. Matties are in poor demand and empty herring are practically unsaleable.From July 1st, 1919 to June 30th, 1920, the exports of herring was as follows:

Salt Bulk and Frozen . . . . .	Brls.

LOBSTERS.

The lobster situation opened with good prospects, and first price quoted was $30.00 and some thousand cases were contracted for at $32.00. Prices rapidly declined, and for some months the position has been that there were no buyers. Cost of production was higher this year than ever before, and a loss will have to be taken all around before the catch is marketed.Lobsters are now being offered at lower prices than have been quoted since 1912, and are much below pre-war prices. This should encourage consumption, and as there are only about 2,500 cases held in the Island the prospects are that they will be disposed of before next season's pack commences.

BRINGS $100,000 LIBEL SUIT.

Action for $100,000 damages against the publishers of Town Topics, of New York city, has been begun by Mrs. Blanche Bonaparte, who objects to newspaper articles which, she says, made accusations of snobbery and slurs upon the harmonious relations between herself and her husband, Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, great grandson of Jerome Bonaparte, King of Westphalia; great grandnephew of Napoleon, Bonaparte, Emperor of France, and nephew of Charles J. Bonaparte, formerly Secretary of the Navy and Attorney General.Lumbering IndustryPassengers arriving in the city bring the not too cheery news that large numbers of men employed in the lumber woods are being paid off by the A.N.D. Co. This information is but a verification of a statement given out to the Press last week by the Prime Minister, Hon. R. A. Squires, when he stated officially and doubtless upon information received from headquarters of the Company, that it would be useless for men seeking employment to leave their homes and go forward to Badger or Millertown the principal stations of the A.N.D. Co. in quest of work.It will be remembered during the past fall, at the close of the fishery, and even during September and October months the Grand Falls people advertised extensively both through the city Press and agents at various centres for men. The terms of agreement in view of the short fishery were very attractive, and a large number of men, who in more prosperous seasons, were able to stay at home, decided to engage in lumbering to help out the bread box. Weather conditions were ideal for a big cut during the fall months; and with an ample supply of labor available, the A.N.D.
Co. finds itself in the position to-day that a record cut is already in sight.
Enough wood, we are informed, has already been yarded to meet the requirements of the mills at Grand Falls for a year to come. This calculation we further understand is based on the assumption that the mills will be operated at the top-notch capacity. The A.N.D. Co. have also this year let contracts to outside parties to supplyFUN FOR WOMEN

then perfect results are guaranteed.
Each package of "Diamond Dyes" dye worn, shabby skirts, waists, thing, whether wool, silk, linen, cotton or mixed goods, new, rich, fadeless colors. Druggists has Color Card.them with a very considerable quantity of pulp wood. It is, however, regrettable in the extreme that willing workers, who had hoped for several months employment are to be laid off at a time when, judged by the standard of other years, the real work in the lumber woods should begin in earnest. In normal times, the problem which faced these conditions above referred to, presents may not call for more than passing comment; but mere expediency cannot determine our course of action in dealing with labor as a people to-day. The aims of corporations, and individual employers alike must be made subservient to the welfare of the common good. The spirit of justice must be observed to the full. To avail of present conditions in the hope that next year will bring cheaper labor and better returns may prove a boom-bang to those who seek to avail of a transitory depression to reduce wages in an unjust proportion to the cost of living. Justice on the part of the employed requires something more than a wage sufficient to give him bread and butter and tea and bread for breakfast dinner and supper.We have said that these are not normal times, and consequently in dealing with what might be called our third national source of income, the pulp and paper industry, the Government should not hesitate one hour in facilitating work along these lines with the earning power of the people to its fullest capacity. It is our opinion that restrictions on the exportation of pulp wood should be raised for a limited period of time, despite the settled policy of the Government not to allow pulp wood in its new state to be exported from the country. Ver-be exported from the country. We know our forests are not inexhaustible; we are in full accord with an intelligent policy of afforestation which should speedily be undertaken by the Government, but with one paper making industry in operation in this country, and a home consumption confined to four or five daily papers, it seems a far cry to the day when we shall be sending to the markets of the world one quarter value of our forest wealth in the form of the finished product.Let us, therefore, look for a moment to the enormous export business which the neighboring Dominion of Canada does in the pulp and paper industry.

With the figures for the year 1915 before me I find that Canada exported pulp and paper in that year to the value of $71,735,325. The largest bulk of this was exported to the United States, for since 1912 Canadian paper has been admitted free to the United States. In 1917 Canada supplied 492, 000 tons of her own total output to the United States. This is not so much to be wondered at when one realizes that in the United States there are approximately 2,500 daily and Sunday papers and about 14,000 weeklies, with an approximate circulation of 71,000,000 copies. Canada produces for sale 2,525 tons of newsprint paper and 2,500 tons of pulp of all kinds every day. A casual glance at these figures will, we think, convinced every unbiased person that it is high time we got busy and put into effect a sane policy regarding the export of pulpwood. Conservation by all means; but a conservation or a land policy which according to present methods, means that the infant spruce born yesterday shall have reached maturity before given the axe, unless it is to be manufactured into paper in Newfoundland will find most of this and the coming generation sleeping beneath the weeping willows in the country Church Yard. It is said that a spruce tree takes from 100 to 150 years to arrive at maturity. The Scandinavian countries before the war shipped annually hundreds of thousands of pit props to Great Britain and they are still doing business. They are not waiting for the establishment of mills to consume their product in their own country. Germany early in the war discovered that wood pulp could be substituted for cotton in the manufacture of explosives and gun cotton. And it is said that almost all of Sweden's pulp went to Germany for this purpose during the war. Britain herself used over 200,000 tons of paper for munition purposes. The demand to-day is insistent for pulp and paper and prices are very attractive, why not we in this country go to it and get our share while the prices are right. Give the people who are willing to work for it a share of the timber wealth of their native land.

OBITUARY

FRANCIS SAMSON.

No matter how poor the home, no matter how palatial, let it be the abode of happiness or the tenement of misery when the Angel of Death enters its portal sadness follows and bereaved loved ones mourn for the departed one whose dear presence is lost to them and which a newly made grave encloses. In the demise of Mr. Francis Samson, which occurred on the 15th January, an erstwhile happy home has been plunged into deep grief and most people of the place share in the sorrow which his relatives and immediate friends so poignantly feel. Last Friday the subject of this obituary, his uncle and brother Edwin removed from Catalina to Port Union and worked on the beautiful church there all summer, erecting their house in the autumn. Francis becoming ill was forced to quit work, on December 20th, developed typhoid and despite the best medical attention gradually sank until his death occurred on the date above mentioned. Francis Samson, who had reached the age of 23 years, was a young man whom to know was to esteem and admire. Cautious and kindly, honest and straightforward, he made many friends at Port Union and Catalina all of whom deeply regret the early termination of what promised to be a useful and promising life. The deceased leaves to mourn him a wife and infant child, a living father and mother, two brothers, Edwin and Solomon, M.H.A. for Willingate, and many other relatives.
One brother, Neville, a brave soldier of the Empire, made the Supreme Sacrifice while gallantly facing the enemy at Cambrai on Dec. 3rd, 1917. To the bereaving widow, parents, brothers and friends the Advocate tenders its sincere condolence.

The State Bank Question!

The Daily News discusses the matter of a State Bank this morning and while against the proposition, itself supplies ample justification that an institution such as Mr. Coaker has advocated can be set up in Newfoundland and be run to the advantage of the whole country.

When the "Daily News" says that "its manager and directors must be free from political influence of any kind, and subject only to the will of Parliament," the "Daily News" repeats in effect, only what Mr. Coaker has already said. When that paper says that a State Bank must be free of even the most powerful influence in the land, it only states what must be the policy of a State Bank for Newfoundland. The suggestion of the "News" that the proposal must be vetoed because it comes from Mr. Coaker is one that is worthy of a political opponent, but utterly unworthy from a patriotic viewpoint. The idea that Mr. Coaker or any politician would have full control of a State Bank is so utterly ridiculous that no one can take it seriously.

The whole tenor of the "News" editorial is that, not only can politicians not be trusted to run a State Bank but that we have no business men whatever who can be trusted to know how a Banking institution can be run. The refutation of this is found in the fact that in Newfoundland we have Newfoundlanders as managers of Canadian Banks, in Canada we have several outstanding instances where large branches of Canadian Banks have Newfoundlanders as managers, and of these Mr. Alfred Peters is a good example. He is manager of a branch of the Bank of Montreal in Calgary, with over sixty clerks under him. Surely Newfoundland can well supply the material for a good Banking Institution here, and one which would be far superior to that of the Commercial Bank which the Daily News harks back to this morning. It must be remembered that a similar institution, the Union Bank, was fully solvent at the time of our Bank Crash, a fact proven by the payment of over 80 per cent to its creditors.

No one wants "unrestricted credits," as the "News" makes out is the plan of those advocating a Newfoundland Bank, but the proposition is a patriotic one and just as reasonable as the idea of supporting "local industries" for the purpose of "keeping our money in the country." The project should not be looked upon in a narrow spirit, but weighed dispassionately and without prejudice.

RESOLUTIONS OF GOWER STREET CHURCH OFFICIAL BOARD

At a meeting of the Official Board of the Gower Street Methodist Church the following resolution was unanimously adopted, namely:—

That where public criticism has been made of a reference in a recent sermon by the Superintendent of this circuit, the Rev. E. W. Forbes, M.A. to the hostile attitude evinced towards the Prohibition Act in a quarter where administration of the Law and not ridicule of Legislative enactment should be expected, and whereas in the opinion of the Board the reference in the sermon of Mr. Forbes to hostility to the Prohibition Act was fully justified, and to attempt denial of this implies a conspiracy among the newspaper reporters of this city:

Be it therefore Resolved That this Board approves the attitude of the Pastor, Rev. E. W. Forbes, respecting the Prohibition Act, and will be found ready at any time to support by voice River, Rev. Fr. Murphy, Conception or pen any clergyman or layman who in an open and proper manner calls at Dalton Council, there was an explicit attention to abuse of authority exemplification of the third degree in or unwarranted criticism in connection with any legal enactment. The Board charitably regards with town by yesterday's shore train.

rather than resentment the lengthy letter published by the Daily Star on Saturday last and would simply remind the author that abuse is not argument, and regrets that his remarkable talents should be so misdirected.

Signed on behalf of the Official Board.

Recording Secretary.

THE YEAR JUST PAST!

By HON. W. F. COAKER.

Then came the agitation to ruin the Exporters' Conference when one paper openly advised sedition in order to upset the Colony's apple-cart. That failed and the Exporters resolved to organize an association, and succeeded in spite of opposition. The association was organized and has proven its usefulness to the trade the past fall, and another attempt to injure the Government failed.

Still the campaign of blue ruin and destruction went on and the Trade was compelled to inflict a severe and well deserved castigation to the Tory press, and another attempt of the Blue Ruinists to bring about financial embarrassment and low prices was nipped in the bud.

Then the aid of the genius of destruction, trouble and intrigue was availed of and the heeled of hatred were trailed to their work of destroying the F. R. U. and Coaker. Heeled appeared on board of every schooner with fish to sell, and an effort made to poison fisherman against their only protection to secure decent prices. They met in Morine's office night after night, and at last something was arranged and a meeting held, with what result every reader is aware. I boldly accepted the challenge and held a meeting in the heart of the strongest anti-Coaker constituency in the Colony, and once more the tables were turned on the foes of the fishermen, and the genius of destruction was administered another dose of very bitter medicine.

The truth is had the regulations been raised then fish would not have been saleable at $4. The fishermen have to thank the Regulations for securing for them $8 and $9 for Labrador the past season. They have the money and the exporters have the fish; but confident am I that had Toryism triumphed in September $4 per qtl. would have been their portion and not the splendid price secured.

I may be able to help those who shoulder the great burden of carrying 250,000 qtls. of Labrador fish purchased at a price that was barely enough to make two ends meet during my visit to the markets. If I am, I shall be thankful. I possess the calm assurance, the result that comes from duty faithfully performed, which strengthens and supports me at this time, for I have done all that was humanly possible to avert the calamity that unscrupulous politicians at home have for one year endeavoured by every conceivable device and intrigue to bring upon my native land as the price to be paid by the electorate for driving from office in November 1919—the conglomeration known now as the Blue Ruinists.

A GOOD STORY OF SIR WM. MacGREGOR

(Tit-Bits)

As an illustration of thrift and determination, the story of Sir William MacGregor, at one time Lieutenant-Governor of British New Guinea, would be hard to beat.

Sir William, when completing his training at a Scottish University, found his money becoming exhausted. He could spare no time from his studies in which to earn any. Something had to be done, so MacGregor called his old Scottish landlady into consultation as to ways and means.

"Well, Mr. MacGregor, how much a week can you find?"

"Half a crown."

"Well, I can do it for that."

And this is how she did it. MacGregor had a bowl of porridge for breakfast, two fresh herrings or one red one—the cost of the fresh ones being identical with the cured one—for dinner, and another bowl of porridge for supper. He completed his course and took the gold medal for his year.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S EVENTS

What promises to be the most enjoyable social event of the season is the G.W.V. dance to be held in the C.C.C. Hall to-morrow night. The sale of tickets has been exceptionally big but the Committee in charge of the arrangements are making provision for a very large gathering. The music will be rendered by the C.C.C. Band, and the following ladies are looking after the catering: Miss May Furlong, Mrs. Angus Reid, Mrs. Charles R. Ayre, Mrs. Hugh Anderson, Mrs. George Turner, Mrs. Harold Ayre, Mrs. (Dr.) Knight. A number of other enthusiastic lady supporters of the Association are lending their aid and Mrs. Mackeen is Convener of the entire Ladies' Committee. An excellent supper is being prepared and the tickets will cost only $1.50 for gentlemen and $1.00 for ladies. In the event of the hockey match taking place the start of the dance will be delayed so as to allow people time to get to the C.C.C. Hall.

THE BIBLE SOCIETY

The annual meeting of the Nfld. Bible Society was held in the Meth. College Hall last night. His Excellency the Governor presided and spoke at some length of the work of the Society throughout the world, of its numerous translations and of the difficulties which attended these translations. During the past year the Bible has been translated in 111 additional languages and dialects, which now brought the number of translations to about 640. After the Governor's address the annual report of the Society was presented by Mr. John Leamon, Vice President, and the financial report by Mr. R. A. Templeman, Financial Secretary.

In moving the adoption of the annual report, Rev. Dr. Hemmison dealt eloquently in a plea that a greater interest be taken in the Society's work. He was encouraged to see the audience so large and representative. The Word of God came to him in many ways, especially did it come to him through nature, through man's intelligence and through the soul that is within us all.

In seconding the adoption of the report, the Rev. Dr. Jones deplored the fact that the bible was not read as much as formerly and, in his usual brilliant style, commended the Book of Books to all as a beacon that would light us along the coasts of life.

The report was unanimously adopted. A vote of thanks proposed by Mr. Arthur Mews, C.M.G., was accorded the Governor, who in responding thanked Mr. Mews and the Cochrane St. Methodist Choir for their splendid rendering of the musical programme. Two anthems were sung by the choir. "At even ere the sun was set" and "Now the day is over," both of which were rendered in a highly creditable manner.

After the audience sang "The Day Thou Gavest Lord, is ended" His Lordship Bishop White pronounced the Benediction.

Last year's officers were unanimously re-elected.

But why import your counter checks and other stationery when the Union Publishing Company can make them better and cheaper than the foreign article?

PASSING OF PIONEER FISHERMAN

A message received in the city yesterday contained the sad news of the passing of Jonathan Parsons of Lumsden. Mr. Parsons was a veteran fisherman of the North and was well known for his many qualities. There were very few people in the vicinity in which the deceased spent the greater part of his life who did not know him, and those who had the honour to be numbered amongst his friends speak of him as one of the finest of the fine old stock who braved the hardships of the Northland and established themselves along the Coastline of the Country which came to be looked upon by those venture some westerners as their "home". Deceased had suffered for many months from a disease for which he could find no cure, despite repeated visits to the Hospital and the best efforts of medical and surgical attendance but knowing that the end was near he bore his suffering with that courage and fortitude for which he was noted in the days when health and strength were his. A strong man in life, he was strong in the faith which rendered his sufferings as nothing in comparison with the happiness beyond the tomb. Deceased left to mourn a widow, one daughter, Lydia, the wife of Mr. James Parsons of Codroy, manager of the F.P.U. Store at Lumsden; and three sons, Garfield, Darius and Joseph. Garfield is one of the most prominent men in the ranks of the Fishermen's Organization, and has been Chairman of the District Council of Lumsden and a member of most of the Companies of the Union. To these and other relatives of the deceased who had passed the three score and ten mark the "Advocate" tenders its sincere sympathy.

ARRIVED HOME SAFE

Mr. Mark Waterman and Mr. Benjamin Oke of Fogo, who left here by the express on Thursday last en route to their homes via Lewisporte accompanying the body of Joseph Waterman, son of the former, who died at the General Hospital on the 22 ultimo as a result of a gunning accident, arrived safely on Sunday after a very trying experience; part of which consisted of carrying the corpse over 60 miles by dog team over the ice which had recently formed, from Campellton to Fogo.

Mr. Hibbs M. H. A. has been apprised to-day of the safe arrival by a message from Mr. Oake.

A FIRE ALARM

An alarm from box 28 at 9.30 a.m. today brought the Western and Central fireman to Sheehan's Shute, where a blaze had started in a house occupied by a man named Barry and owned by another named Wakhum. The soot in the chimney ignited and the heat thus engendered caused the woodwork about the mantel to ignite. A few pails of water thrown on the blaze by the firemen extinguished it with very little damage occurring.

As time went on new situations would have to be met in human society and so he established a college of men who were to face these new circumstances and still preserve its message in all its purity. He to-day realize how divine was that fore-knowledge for since the great upheaval, when for the first time whole nations threw off allegiance to the Papacy and its Bishops, confusion has ensued, so that in many interpretations put on the Sacred Text it is hard indeed to recognize Christianity at all.

Apart from the spiritual advantages conferred upon mankind by such a body, there are what may be looked upon as quasi-spiritual or temporal advantages also. Down the Middle Ages the Catholic Church, through her Bishops was a bulwark of civilization. While befriending the poor when his cause was a just one, it pointed out the duty of obedience. While denouncing rulers it pointed out to them the important duties that were theirs, and how much was to be expected from them when their subjects regarded as the upholders of law and the defenders of the commonwealth. Historic examples of the patriotism of individual Bishops are not wanting and they have not feared to heard the tyrant in his den. In England Cardinal Stephen Langton amongst the warlike Norman Barons wringing from King John the great Magna Charta. In Ireland St. Laurence O'Toole organizing the scattered clans to keep back the invading Norman hordes. Cardinal Mercier, in Belgium, standing defiantly before his country's defence of his people and his country's flag, are some of the instances one may cite as evidence.

But happily I am under no necessity to go abroad in quest of evidence for the Churchman's influence leaving its imprint on the age when there is so much of it within reach at home. The history of the Church in our own country contains pages as illuminating as any to be found in that of any land. Deeds of sacrifice are here we find, the rule rather than the exception; the tongue of an angel would be required to do it justice, for the full import of the deeds done through a supernatural motive can rightly be known only in Heaven. And in this very Diocese you yourselves know better than I can tell you the trials endured and the sacrifices readily made and cheerfully borne for God's glory by its missionary priests and Bishops. The story if it were published would form as glorious a record as any in the annals of Ecclesiastical history.

The lonely life of Father Belanger, the first resident priest on this coast, is an inspiration. The unremitting labors of Monsignor Thomas Sears against difficulties that man accounted insuperable, is a golden treatise of missionary enterprise. The tireless energy of Archbishop Howley reminds one of Francis Xavier's restless ambition to plant the Cross far and wide. The courageous spirit which animated the present illustrious Archbishop of Toronto to build this beautiful Cathedral, when only two or three houses could be found in St. George's, makes us realize what grace can do. And the last of those who have gone before—the loving and much-loved Bishop Power, showed forth in his life amongst us how much love can accomplish by asserting itself over matter. For nothing else but love for God's Church and for you, dear people, can account for it how many years he bore up against a frail and weak constitution. Therefore, My Lord, (turning towards the Bishop), in adding your name to the short line of Prelates who have laboured in this Diocese, you find yourself in no mean company. Their lives were held in benediction, their deaths (such as have gone) were precious in the sight of the Lord, their memories are as the incense of prayer.

Such thought as I have suggested should make us thank God that we have with us to-day our new Bishop to carry on the work in which his predecessors have so nobly striven, prepared to be to us a Father and a Friend, and above all, fitted by reason of the grace of his exalted office to unfold to us the doctrines of Christ in all their purity and loveliness.

During the discourse the large congregation followed with close attention the words of the preacher. Then the Bishop came from the Throne to the Altar and intoned the Creed which was taken up by the Choir in the beautiful Gregorian Chant. The Holy Mass proceeded and it seemed peculiarly fitting to hear the Bishop's voice ring out clear and resonant in the Cathedral which had so long been in mourning. Particularly towards the end of Mass the triple blessing helped all to realize the better that St. George's See was no longer a vacant one, and the prayers of a devout and loyal people were offered up for strength and grace and length of days for the new Bishop.

When the Mass had ended Addresses were presented from the Priests of the Diocese and from the people of the Cathedral Parish. Fr. Kerwan read the address from the Priests, the text of which follows:

ADDRESS FROM THE PRIESTS OF THE DIOCESE.

MY LORD,—
With warmest felicitations to you on your elevation to the dignity of the Episcopate we join our loyal and hearty welcome to you on your advent to St. George's as our Bishop. As your spiritual children we, the Priests of the Diocese of St. George's, pledge to you the homage of our filial love and devotion and of our wholehearted co-operation with you in your administration of the Diocese.

stranger; the first years of your ministry in the priesthood were spent in the Diocese for which you were ordained, and we recognize a dispensation of Providence in the impaired health that made it necessary for you to seek a change from here to the less severe winter climate of the Diocese of St. John's.

since the time you laboured in this Diocese as a young priest and your return to it now as its Bishop a great change has taken place in the Diocese. It was then only a Vicariate with few priests and with few, if any, well-defined parishes. Under the wise guidance of Bishop McNell, now Archbishop of Toronto—the grand lines were laid out of which a Diocese should develop, and your venerated predecessor, the late Bishop Power, building on these lines consolidated the Diocese into an organized unit of the Church, having twelve parishes—with Churches, Schools, Presbyteries and Priests.

During the years that the transformation of St. George's from a Vicariate to a Diocese was taking place there was a steady progress not only in the spiritual well-being of the people of the West Coast, but in the material well-being also.

When the late lamentable world-wide war broke out the Diocese was in a flourishing condition spiritually and temporally, and hopes ran high that the dawn of a new era of prosperity should soon show itself in the West. Great schemes for the development of the rich material resources of the coast were mooted and not a few of them seemed certain of realization. But when the war cloud burst that was gathering while men were asleep, the things that might have been were only as a dream, and now in the universal upheaval that follows the scourge of war, Newfoundland, the West Coast particularly is feeling the baneful effects. Not only have her high hopes vanished, but the Fishery, the mainstay of her people, seems no longer able to provide means of living for them and thus the outlook seems anything but encouraging.

A reorganization of all the resources of the Coast and of the whole Colony seems imperative and in this reorganization St. George's, the Diocese of the West Coast, needs a Bishop with wide and varied experience and knowledge of the conditions, religious, social, and material of the Colony, and one gifted with wisdom and high administrative ability to guide its destinies in the new state of things that must necessarily arise.

In Your Lordship we recognise all the qualities that are needed in a Bishop coming into the See of the West Coast at the present time. Your labours in the Dioceses of St. George's and of St. John's have given you a wide knowledge of the conditions religious, social and material of the people, and your zeal, wisdom and administrative ability are shown in every parish which was fortunate enough to have you for Pastor, and eminently are those qualities shown by you in the culminating work of your Priesthood, the completion of the beautiful Church of St. Patrick's in the capital city of the Colony, St. John's.

With joyful and encouraged hearts we bid Your Lordship welcome to the Diocese of St. George's and wish you Ad Multos Annos.

Signed:
A. Sears, Dean O'Rourke, Dean Hawkins, J. M. Joy, P. Pinneault, P. F. Adams, S. St. Croix, S. Callan, A. Noll, J. F. Kerwan, W. R. Brennan, M. O'Reilly, T. Dubourdien, M. Brogan.

Next came the address from the people of the Cathedral Parish. This was read by Mr. Aloysius O'Reilly and presented by Magistrate MacDonnell. The text follows:—
May it please Your Lordship,—
On behalf of the people of the Cathedral Parish of St. Joseph we beg to extend to you a hearty welcome to your Diocese, and we sincerely trust that you may be spared many years to rule over us until it may please God to confer on you even higher honors.

I, within the memory of many of us that your first work in God's service was when you came among us as a new priest in this then new and out of the way mission. No doubt you will notice many changes; many who were indebted to you then, have passed away. With the passing years the work of the Church has progressed; churches, schools and presbyteries have been built, and the beautiful group of buildings on Cathedral Hill, now stands where even that short time ago, all was wilderness.

It has pleased Almighty God that you should be called to succeed the illustrious prelates who have, in the past, labored so earnestly in our service and whose works remain as a monument to their zeal for God's glory and the salvation of souls. We, as a people, are specially favored in having as our Bishop one whose work in the several parishes in which he has labored, particularly in the Parish of St. Patrick's, has become known over the whole Dominion as a most worthy successor to the late Archbishop Howley to the present Archbishop of Toronto, and to our late well beloved and deeply lamented Bishop Power.

It is worthy of remark that on this the first occasion the Diocese has had to greet its new Prelate, the hearts of priests and people—attuned to the liveliest sentiments of thankfulness and joy—gave no unfeigned expression of their feelings. All recognize in the new Bishop a high standard by nature and grace to carry on in the apostolic spirit the work of the Diocese; they have heard with admiration of his distinguished gifts, of his self-sacrificing labours, and of his enlightened missionary activity. Their joy is enhanced by the fact that while he is the dearest to them of the Apostolic Commission he is at the same time a member of their own household, who from having been away now veritably returns home to the Diocese which to serve he had long years ago consecrated his life. He comes with the accumulated experience and matured wisdom which twenty-five years of strenuous priestly life could not fail to impart to him, and he is met on every side not only with the heartiest feelings of welcome and sympathy but with the most confident expectations of a beneficent and fruitful episcopal career. We wish the new Bishop long years of health and vigour in which to realize the high expectations that have been awakened in his regard, and we offer him our respectful homage and our cordial felicitations as he ascends to the exalted position to which he has been called by the Vicar of Christ. Faite agus tighid roimh an Easdaig Nua.

On behalf of the parishioners of the Cathedral Parish of St. George's. Signed.

R. MacDonnell, J.P., S.M., A. J. O'Reilly, M. J. Downey, J. B. Dupu, F. White, P. Alexander, T. Butler.

In receiving the addresses His Lordship said that he was happy to be present amongst the priests and people whom God had confided to his cure, and he was pleased indeed, (as who would not be?) to note the warmth of the welcome which priests and people had extended to him as their Bishop. He realised how much that meant especially in the case of the priests who had come, with much inconvenience to themselves and from long distances, to meet and welcome him. He needed not the assurances which he had just received to be aware of the loyalty and devotedness of the Priests of St. George's Diocese, nor any affirmation or promise of their co-operation on the part of the people of the Cathedral Parish; of both he felt assured. The ties which bound the priests and people to the See of St. George's had been well and deeply established by his predecessors as a great unifying influence and he knew that these ties would, under God's blessing, endure to the end and increase in strength with the years. He had never sought the dignity of bishop and he had accepted it at the fall of duty. It was in the discharge of that duty and to endeavour, as far as lay in his power, to do God's work that he was there, and he felt assured that the efforts of priests and people were directed towards the same high aim. He was deeply touched and encouraged by their reception and from his heart he thanked priests and people. In concluding his remarks His Lordship imparted his personal blessing. In this way was brought to a close a beautiful and impressive ceremony.

It is worthy of remark that on this the first occasion the Diocese has had to greet its new Prelate, the hearts of priests and people—attuned to the liveliest sentiments of thankfulness and joy—gave no unfeigned expression of their feelings. All recognize in the new Bishop a high standard by nature and grace to carry on in the apostolic spirit the work of the Diocese; they have heard with admiration of his distinguished gifts, of his self-sacrificing labours, and of his enlightened missionary activity. Good Things She Heard of Tanlac Verified by Her Own Experience, Declares I Armtmouth Resident.

"I have heard a great many good things about Tanlac, and it has certainly lived up to its reputation in my case," said Mrs. Susan Conrod, Hawthorne St., Dartmouth, N.S.

"I am a strong believer in Tanlac," continued Mrs. Conrod, "and I have a right to be, for it has certainly done me a world of good. For two years I was in a nervous, run-down condition. My doctor seemed to do me more harm than good. I suffered a great deal from constipation and from spells of dizziness, and was terribly nervous. I was never sick enough to take to my bed, but just felt bad, out of sorts, dull and languid all the time.

"But since I have taken Tanlac my whole system has felt the good effects of the medicine, for my digestion seems to be perfect, and I am free from constipation, dizziness, nervousness, and in fact my ailments have all left me. Tanlac has enabled me to enjoy life and good health once more and my gratitude is unbounded."

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTERS ABOUT

We learn that recently, especially on Sunday night, men have been found standing in the hallways of houses evidently with the intention of purloining anything that might be lying about loose. They watch when the people may be in the back or underground kitchens of houses and softly try the doors of the hallways and finding them unlocked enter. On Pleasant and other streets these gentry have been confronted with some of the residents of houses which they had entered and beat a hasty retreat.

ADVERTISE IN THE EVENING ADVOCATE

OBTAINING MONEY UNDER FALSE PRETENCES

Yesterday the 'Advocate' was told a story by a well known man of business which goes to show that there are knaves in this city who while soliciting charity, alleging destitution are but obtaining money under false pretences. This gentleman says that one day last week an able bodied man walked into a business premises and with a harrowing tale of lack of employment and a starving wife and large family at home. Our informant and others present made up an impromptu collection and raising a few dollars tendered to the man who was profuse in his thanks and good wishes to the kind donors. On Saturday last an informant had some business on a large mercantile premises and went into the erection on the wharf where the men who work were being paid. Judge of his surprise and disgust when he found the "deserted" man of a few days before, being handed out $15 which he had worked for on the premises. The gentleman to whom we allude is a type of the kindly charitable people we have in our midst, and the incident alluded to has so disgusted him that he says he will be wary in future in giving except he is sure that recipients are deserving. Another effect that this must have is that really deserving cases will be confounded with the pleas of rogues and real suffering may go unnoticed.
